BULLETIN BOARD: Alan Schneider whose second directoral effort on Broadway, "All Summer Long," opened last night, will begin work on his third immediately. . . . This is Elaine Perry's production of "Anastasia," a play dealing with the last of the Romanoff princesses, by Marcelle Maurette and Guy Bolton. . . . The play, produced as a success in London by Laurence Olivier, will star Vivica Lindford on Broadway. . . . It is scheduled to open December 22 in New York, after a warm-up in New Haven and Philadelphia. . . . Theater Lobby, occupied this week end with the final performances of "Tobias and the Angel" will busy itself next with Christopher Fry's "Venus Observed." . . . This, it announces, despite the successful production of the same work at Olney Theater during the summer. . . . Another Theater Lobby project, "The Crucible," scheduled last spring has been abandoned, however, in view of its current Arena Stage production.
